

Footprints

Waking up from dreaming of watching the dawn

Coming on sun

Over her shoulder

We were laying together by the edge of the sea

She's curled up next to me

I dreamed that I told her

We can stay this free

I'm looking up in the night for any stars that fall

Aren't really stars at all

They flash and they vanish

The skies full of sighs once a meteor's gone

Until the next dawn

The darkness is banished

But the stars shine on

There's water that falls and water that flows

Under rainbows

On down to the ocean

Our footprints are dancing alongside the shore

Waves break and explore

The traces of motion

Then they're not there anymore

They're not there anymore
